

which we are preparing our future citizens. However with every new government there comes new hope and therefore we hope that the new PTI government will look at reforms in education which will power the country into the 21st century. It is necessary that all the pledges made by PTI during their election campaign for the promotion of the education sector are fulfilled, otherwise, people would be disappointed.

The PTI government should adopt effective education policy and increase budget for education sector by taking concrete steps. The newly elected PTI government should work for strengthening the national educational institutions and the system by introducing basic reforms and through creating competition; better Public Private Participation (PPP); encouragement to education startups etc. It is indeed true that during its tenure, the PTI government in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa (KPK) has performed relatively well in the education sector. Educational Planning and Management's (EPM) Pakistan Education Statistics (PES) 2014-15 report stated that KPK was outperforming all other provinces in education. Credit also goes to the PTI for giving education priority as a political issue, as this is the only way the country's major parties can be forced to prioritize the funding of schools and improving access to education. ■
